"There's a much larger story here than the Kennedy family's personal grief about John, or New Orleans's personal grief about being embarrassed about Clay Shaw, or Dallas' personal grief about being the ambush site, or about having a strange police force that acted in a strange manner. It's beyond those three personal issues: It's a universal problem that stretches into the '90s, and goes to the foundations of our society."

The Times Picayune
Friday, May 24, 1991